

The island of Little Cayman and its sister Cayman Brac, where once known as the "Lesser Islands". They are anything but "less" from a diving and fishing perspective. For most visitors, the only "less" they experience is "less crowds", "less traffic" and "less hustle and bustle". Today Little Cayman and Cayman Brac are known as the "Sister Islands".

Little Cayman is located in the northwestern Caribbean just 90 miles (144 km) south of Cuba and 89 miles northeast of Grand Cayman. Cayman Brac lies just 7 miles to the southeast. Little Cayman, measures only 10 miles (16 km) long, barely reaches 40 feet (12 m) at its highest point.